

aroslim®

In a busy world where sight and sound assault the senses on a daily basis, scent diffusion offers a unique and subtle sensory experience - creating a more balanced mood on any day. More sophisticated than any other sense, smell can trigger the memories and emotions that define life's experiences.

Research confirms this powerful connection is a result of the relationship between the limbic system, which is responsible for memory and emotions, and its direct link to the olfactory gland, which registers smell. For this reason, smell is believed to effect up to 75% of our daily emotions.
